

Practise using the correct word to describe quantities!

i Use "some" in positive sentences. For example: He has some good friends.

And use "some" in questions where you expect the answer to be "Yes". For example. Can I have some apples, please? (You know there are apples for sale).

Use "any" in negative sentences. For example: He hasn't got any friends.

"Any" is also used in most questions. For example. Do you have any apples? (You are not sure if they have apples).

?

Joshua hasn't got _____ socks to wear today. They are all in the washing machine!

- some
- any

?

I need to do _____ chores before I can come out and play.

- some
- any

?

It is very foggy today. Can you see _____ stars?

- any
- some

?

I would like _____ croissants, please!

- any
- some

?

They didn't make _____ mistakes in the vocabulary test.

- any
- some

?

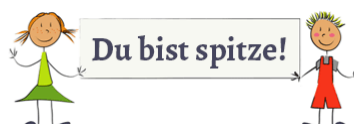

I would like _____ orange juice, please.

- some
- any

?

I haven't got _____ water...

- some
- any

...but Sadie has _____!

- some
- any

Do you have _____ idea where the theatre is?

- some
- any

I took out _____ books from the library today.

- any
- some

There are still _____ places left in our drama class, do you want to join?

- any
- some

I am sorry, there aren't _____ spaces available for the clay workshop.

- any
- some

Do you have _____ siblings?

- some
- any

I would like to invite _____ friends for my birthday tomorrow.

- some
- any

Could we play _____ music in my room?

- any
- some